Medicare basics.

1

What is Medicare?

Medicare is a federal health insurance program for people age 65 and over, as well as for some people under age 65 with certain disabilities and people of any age with end-stage renal disease. Since 1965, it has helped millions of Americans pay for many of the health care services they need. You most likely have already paid in to the program through Social Security.

2

Will Medicare pay all my health care expenses?

No. As good as Medicare is, it doesn't cover everything. Medicare supplement insurance may help pay for some of the out-of-pocket costs that Medicare Parts A and B don't cover, such as deductibles and coinsurance. These expenses may add up, which is why many Americans choose to supplement their Medicare coverage with a Medicare supplement insurance plan. It may help pay some of the out-of-pocket expenses Medicare may not pay.

3

What is Medicare supplement insurance?

All Medicare supplement insurance basic benefits are standardized by the government and offered by private insurance companies. Medicare supplement plans are designed to help pay for some of the out-of-pocket costs Medicare doesn't pay.

Some plans even cover deductibles. As a result, having Medicare supplement insurance could help you save on out-of-pocket medical expenses. Having a Medicare supplement plan also allows you to choose any doctor who accepts Medicare patients — and it travels with you nationwide.

When may I apply?

Generally, the best time to sign up for a Medicare supplement plan is during your six-month open enrollment period that starts the first month in which you are age 65 or older and enrolled in Part B (except in the states of Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York, where guaranteed acceptance is ongoing and Medicare supplement plans are guaranteed available). Some states have additional open enrollment periods, including those for people under age 65. There may be other situations in which your acceptance may be guaranteed.

Medicare Supplement Open Enrollment Period

Your eligibility begins

The first month you are 65 or older and enrolled in Medicare Part B.

This period lasts for 6 months and begins on the first day of the month in which you're both 65 or older and enrolled in Medicare Part B.

Enrolling during this period gives you a guaranteed right to buy any Medicare supplement plan sold in your state, regardless of any medical conditions you may have.

How to choose a Medicare supplement plan.

Decide how much Medicare supplement coverage you need.

Everyone's situation is different, and there are a variety of standardized Medicare supplement plans to choose from. Each plan provides different benefits, so it's important to compare plans before choosing one.

Shop around for pricing.

The monthly premium for your plan will vary and may be based on the coverage offered and which insurance company you choose. When looking at different companies, be sure to compare the cost of plans with the same type of coverage.

Here's how Medicare supplement insurance may save you some out-of-pocket expenses:

Medicare pays

PART A

Fees for covered hospital stays except the Part A deductible and coinsurance amounts.

PART B

About 80% of Part B-covered doctor and outpatient medical expenses (after the annual deductible is met).

Without a Medicare supplement plan

You pay

- Part B premium.
- Part A deductible and any coinsurance amounts.
- Part B annual deductible.
- Out-of-pocket medical expenses Part B does not pay.

Medicare supplement insurance pays*

- Part A coinsurance — and most plans pay the hospital deductible.
- Some plans pay Part B deductible.
- Some of the out-of-pocket expenses not paid by Part B.

You pay

- Part B premium.
- Monthly Medicare supplement insurance premium.
- Limited out-of-pocket costs.

*Depending on your plan.

¹A pre-existing condition is a condition for which medical advice was given or treatment was recommended by or received from a physician within three months prior to your plan's effective date.

Things to consider when selecting an insurance company.

Find a trusted and financially stable insurer.

To learn about the financial stability of a company, check online with an independent rating company like A.M. Best. Also, talk to trusted friends and family members with Medicare supplement plans and find out what works for them.

Be sure the customer service level is what you expect.

Personal attention and helpful advice may make all the difference. Make sure the company you choose is committed to giving you the service you expect. Find out what current customers are saying about their experience with the company.

Look for discounts or innovative benefits.

Every company is different. Be sure to ask the company you're considering what they offer.

Look for plan flexibility.

Some companies allow you to change plans at any time, but others don't. Make sure to ask about the policy on changing plans.¹

¹If you choose to change plans, you may be underwritten and may not be accepted into the plan if you are outside of Open Enrollment or Guaranteed Issue Periods or, if accepted, your rates may change (except in the states of Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York, where guaranteed acceptance is ongoing and Medicare supplement plans are guaranteed available).
